called out the diseases and of the theme of 'The knowledge gap' between the disease with the highest mortality and the one with the most treatable disease - kidney disease.

While about two-thirds of the diseases damage kidneys of around 40,000 people every year, research shows that about a half of the population is not aware of diseases such as diabetes and high blood pressure that usually lead to kidney diseases and almost 90 per cent of kidney patients do not even realise that they have developed the disease until it is too late. What exacerbates the situation is the wrong treatment often because of delayed diagnosis.

A Kidney Foundation study says that about 70-80 per cent of patients damage their kidneys because of late diagnosis and they cannot recover. When kidney disease is one of the most treatable non-commutable diseases kidney disease is one of the most treatable diseases.

Never say 'I'll never get it' about the potential dangers of non-hereditary conditions of the bowel or the brain, the heart or the lungs, the liver or the kidneys. The public and media must be more aware of the importance of early detection and prevention of diseases such as diabetes and hypertension that never much talk in the mainstream media. A servicemen — including the son of a Conservative lawmaker — have arrived in Ukraine bent on fighting Russians, despite UK government warnings against joining the war. Foreign Secretary Liz Truss appeared to give Britons licence to join up when she said on February 27: 'Absolutely, if that's what they wanted to do.' Prime minister Boris Johnson's office, defence secretary Ben Wallace and the head of the armed forces have all disowned Truss's comment, and she reversed herself Wednesday. —AFP, London

Dozens killed in violence in disputed SSudan region.

Several dozen people have been killed in a spasm of intercommunal violence in a disputed area of South Sudan, the UN's emergency response agency OCHA and a local official said on Wednesday. OCHA said the fighting in the oil-rich Abyei area on the border with Sudan had left 36 people killed as of March 6, with an unknown number injured and reportedly 50,000 displaced. --AFP, Juba, South.
